FAGI

About Us

The Forschungskolleg Analytic German Idealism (FAGI) is an international research center at the University of Leipzig. We initiate, structure, and coordinate research and teaching related to German Idealism – from Kant to Hegel – from the perspective of analytic philosophy.

Our goal is to highlight the contributions and resources of German Idealism to reflect critically on concepts that are fundamental for an understanding of ourselves.

How to Get There

FAGI-Humboldt Graduate Summer Course

Robert Brandom
University of Pittsburgh

Georg Hegel

A Spirit of Trust Mediating the Immediate

Consciousness and the Inferential Articulation of Determinate Empirical Content

28.-30. Juni 2016, Universität Leipzig

The course will take place in the beautiful "Albertina."

Synopsis

The course ...

Accompanies Brandom's four lectures on the Consciousness chapter of Hegel's Phenomenology of Spirit. Accordingly, the course will focus on Brandom's reading of Hegel. Topics will include: perception, epistemic authority, generality and particularity, properties and objects, negation, and theoretical objects.

Is this something for you?

We warmly invite registrations from young scholars and graduate students (MA and PhD) with an interest in Hegel or Brandom. Having completed a degree in philosophy or a related discipline is a prerequisite.

Registration

If you wish to attend please contact: Andrea Busch (busch@uni-leipzig.de). The number of places available is limited.

But it is not as a One that it excludes others from itself ... it is through its determinateness ..."*

Readings

Brandom's texts will be distributed before the course. It will be assumed that participants are familiar with Hegel's Phenomenology of Spirit and in particular with the Consciousness chapter.

Robert Brandom is Distinguished Professor of Philosophy at the University of Pittsburgh. He did groundbreaking work in semantics, the philosophy of mind, and epistemology. Much of his work is inspired by Hegel and he is currently writing a book on Hegel.

Format

The course will be an in-depth discussion of the Consciousness chapter of Hegel's Phenomenology of Spirit and Brandom's interpretation of it.

On each of the three days we will focus on the part of the Consciousness chapter on which Brandom will have lectured the previous evening.

Chapters from Brandom's forthcoming book on the Phenomenology will be distributed in advance.
